No Limits

A Letter from the Editor

"I don't think she can do that." "If I were you, I wouldn't try that."
"I really don't know how that would work." "Does he even understand what you are telling him?" There are many different reasons why a person can't do something . . . but in the end, are any of the reasons REALLY reasons not to do something? Or, are they just thoughts that come up when you are not sure HOW to help a student do something? I know that when I am going to try something for the first time I can be nervous and a little bit unsure; helping a student who is Deaf-blind do something for the first time can be nerve racking. Every day my students show me that there are NO LIMITS when it comes to what they can do. It might look different, or take some adaptations, but the students love to do everything that their peers do, living a life without limits!
